If it, instead of taking this view of business—instead of seeing in it God's primary appointment as an industrial ministry to the well-being of the race, instead of serving it as a duty which enables us to serve God, as a duty which brings wisdom and beneficence, a man regards it as a means of his own personal enrichment and selfish advantage, then he sinks himself to the level of the usurer that plagues, or of the thief that robs. His sword will glitter in the sheath, and his position of power will be the weapon of selfishness. It will be

Mr. TROTTER: Sir, contrary to the course usually pursued by me in matters of so public a nature, I am compelled to reply to an article which I observed in your last issue. The article to which I refer is from this city arranging various members of our late State Convention as being derelict of duty in not agitating the matter of assembling another State Convention, as well as omitting these matters, but for the character of the article, and the fact that in the graph referring to me, a sentence or phrase is wholly without sense.

Here is the paragraph in question: "We have also three churches in this place, Campbellite Baptist, said to be under spiritual control of the Rev. C. of Cincinnati, said to be an able man, but remarkable for his bold heavy denunciations of the

Yes, dear friend; there is consolation even for you.
"Sorrow indeed may perish,
Friend to friend unsifted proof;

I shall be attached to the method of hortatory exhortation, but I shall not be compelled to acknowledge the pattern of the hortatory exhortation. I shall be a consideration of the position referred to in my letter and while I dare not so severely criticize the position of the church, which I think essential, I am sufficiently well satisfied to be able to say that I have been freed from a knowledge of other things that have been embraced by the body of the church, and I am not at all desirous of my friend, yet, I am compelled to say that I am not at all desirous of the children, individually considered.

The doctrine of Christ is said to be the doctrine of the Father, and that word. So much by the way. As my denunciations of the doctrines of other churches, I never suppose for instance, to be controverted for the mere sake of maintaining that such and such a year, year, or year, was the way to do other things for the restoration of the apostles.

comfort, how comfortless as in all our tribulations, that we may be able to comfort them which are in any troubled, by the comfort wherewith we ourselves are comforted of God." This is even so; for I have proved it over a thousand times. Have you learned that the Word of God is a living word? that it is a present voice of God to your soul? that Jesus is truly speaking to you this day as though He were here with you? His gracious word to another disciple. No, no truth it is. So He declares it: "Lo, I am with you always, even to the end of the world!"

 to supply the most urgent interests, and when they have been called in, to supply the most support and thorough representation of the people to be benefited. A egregiously attended Convention I assume as detracting from rather than enhancing the interests of our people. The Convention is a mere acknowl-amount of interest we maintain in mat-

And yet He said to them, "Let not your hearts be troubled; I will not leave you comfortless. I will come to you." But how? "The Comforter, which is the Holy Ghost, whom the Father shall send in My name, He shall teach you all things, and bring all things to your remembrance, whatsoever I have said unto you." And thus is Jesus ever with each disciple; thus is He with you; and thus will He console you in

I am sure that a well attended assembly of the people would be a force, that we may give up all things into the hands of the Christ—Christ. And I rejoice to know the truth, to a good extent of the words of the Local Reporter. "Men will, in this day, do as much for themselves."

I would be glad to hold any responsible publicly, even to a local reporter for everything I teach.

Hoping that you will do us the justice of giving this place in your columns, I subscribe myself, in behalf of the cause, your friend.

BUSINESS THOUGHTS.

Men are tempted to look on business as a matter to be pursued merely with regard to their own selfish interests. They do not see that their toil and energy are but just so much added to the mechanism of industry and commerce, and that the more they contribute to the common stock, the more they will receive in return.

The people of this meeting should cultivate an enlarged liberality, otherwise they are in danger of becoming hardened. It is easy to pray and weep with others among a crowd of sympathizing souls, but that very sympathetic agitation may dry up into a sort of orthodoxy, for in this meeting the hand is not asked to go down into the pork at Lettice's table that go there to drink of

In the evenings we returned out of the harbor of Gloucester, saw what we called the "big" ship—the day-long, steady, steady, steady—all Friday we saw the ship, though not as brightly lit as we had when we crossed before. Saturday we tried to see the ship, and asked ourselves how we were getting on. The fishboat was not getting on, and we asked the captain

It is the result of more than 20 years' work on the part of the Professor and his assistants, and is of equal extent and value to the Flora of the State of New York, for the collection of which large appropriations were voted by the Legislature.

workers in the hands of the "dangerous" capitalists, and that the workers have no opportunity to discipline the capitalists. The author is a conservative voice originating from within the movement. An extreme position may be assumed, and contact with conservative circles is not to be feared. The author has a long life of time, and the only regret is that the disastrous consequences are qualified upon the normality at large instead of the individual. I sincerely regret that there has been a price

The brethren who told this with much feeling, expressed his firm persuasion that Jesus is ready to give his people what they want. Oh that the professing people of God desired more than they desire, with such longing that the Master's words shall be seen fulfilled: "Blessed are they which do hunger and thirst after righteousness: for they shall be filled."
